1. Weather. The month of January brought a continuation of cool damp weather. The average temperature for the month was approximately 72 degrees, with a high of 81 and a low of 62. A total of 3.82 inches of rain fell on the Danang area.

2. Mine and RPG Incidents. There were no mine incidents within the battalion during January. RPG's were used against elements of the battalion on three occasions. On the night of 3-4 January SSDC OP Piranha (AT 950727) received approximately 30 RPG rounds, destroying one bunker and damaging three others. There were four USMC WIA (Evac) and four USMC WIA (Non-Evac) as a result of this attack. At about the same time one of two tanks with an SSDC reaction force moving against an enemy mortar position was hit by two RPG rounds resulting in minor turret damage and two USMC WIA (Non-Evac). The third incident occurred during a large scale sapper attack on FSB Ross on the morning of 6 January. One tank was hit by an RPG round, resulting in minor damage and one USMC WIA (Non-Evac).

3. Indications. With an increase in enemy activity indicated by PW's, agents, captured documents and other intelligences sources, the utilization of tanks is expected to increase in the coming weeks. In conjunction with this, the decrease in rainfall each successive month increases the mobility of tracked vehicles, enhancing their effectiveness in combat operations. Recent intelligence reports indicate that the enemy may increase his use of booby traps with long delay fuses during the next upsurge in activity.
